

will have to bear the loss caused by Berrien's shortage. The attorney general said he could not discuss his opinion in any way until he places the matter before the governor Wednesday.

State officials who have been investigating the legal phases of the Berrien case stated Tuesday that they are confident that the state will adopt a policy based on the attorney general's ruling which will prevent the losses incurred falling on city and county school officials who received the warrants in good faith and who induced them under a plan adopted years ago by the state board of education, a state agency.

Mailed in Atlanta. The letter from Berrien to Governor Hardwick was mailed in Atlanta at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, according to the postmark. It was handed to the governor Tuesday morning. Governor Hardwick expressed the belief that the letter was sent to Atlanta from another city and was mailed in Atlanta by some friend or relative of Berrien. The letter was written in Berrien's hand. It was written on note paper and was addressed to Governor Hardwick.

Following is the letter: Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Governor: I have written instructions to my clerk, Miss Austin, Hemlock 2701, to co-operate with your office in any way. The amount, I think, due on warrants for 1921 is $48,511.

It is useless here to dwell on the "wars" and "wherefore" as I am not a lawyer. I have about formed a connection to a large city and believe I will soon make enough money, which added to other money due me, will enable me to pay everything I owe in full.

To such extent as I am let alone will I succeed. I have health and I think ability. Any letter sent my sister, Miss Laura M. Berrien, care Burlington Hotel, Washington, D. C., will reach me promptly.

Yours truly, R. S. BERRIEN, JR.

Another development in the Berrien case was the suggestion by state official that the case is a matter which will be investigated by the legislature at its next session with a view toward revising the law permitting the sale of deferred school warrants.

Passed Under Harris. The present law permitting the sale of deferred school warrants was passed during the administration of Governor Nat E. Harris. The law says nothing about the method to be used in the disposition of the warrants and simply authorizes the governor to issue such warrants. It was stated by the officials that the legislature unquestionably will be asked to clarify the present law at its next session and to pass measures which will enable the state to dispose of the warrants under ample protection.

Superintendent Brittain stated Tuesday that he does not believe the Berrien shortage will amount to more than $48,511, the amount set forth in Berrien's letter. The superintendent had estimated prior to the receipt of Berrien's letter that the shortage would run to approximately $48,500 and he had one small county yet to hear from which county's amount would bring the figure to about the same sum named by Berrien.

SEEK TO ALIGN HARDING PLAN IN 1920 PLATFORM

The occasion arises, and without involving them as participants, and not as peace-makers, in a matter of quarrels, the merits of which they are unable to judge.

The platform also denounces the league of nations as a regulation of the policies of Washington, Jefferson and Monroe, and commended the senators who prevented ratification of the treaty of Versailles.

Senator Watson stated that it was not generally known that the plank adopted at Chicago was written by Frank Root, but that it was not, nevertheless, Mr. Root is a strong advocate of the association of nations idea, he said, "and I believe that this plank, which he wrote, will do more for the fine suggestion made by President Harding. We can enter such an association as the platform of 1920 and, in doing so, we will not have to have any thought of destroying or making trouble with the league of nations."

The Indiana senator further expressed the opinion that there is no reason why such an association of nations as the administration is committed to and in favor of which the republican party went on record at Chicago cannot bring about an enlarged conference on permanent basis for a friendly discussion between the nations on international questions.

G. O. P. Resentment. Considerable resentment in republican circles has been caused by Senator Borah's declaration of war against any association of nations that will in whole or in part resemble the league of nations. That he would oppose such an association was known to his friends and supporters by those who are supporting the stand of the president.

It appears certain that President Harding has an overwhelming majority of supporters in the senate. This majority is as impressive on the democratic side as the republican, friends of the president insist.

Senator Borah has declined to add anything to the statement he gave out in the senate that he will not explain his position in full on the floor of the senate sometime during next week.

Indications are now that Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, one of the democratic leaders, will take the first opportunity after congress convenes to "congratulate" the president for his position in regard to the association of nations idea. It is further thought that democratic senators will champion the Harding suggestion on the ground that it will be the league of nations under another name. In this case, the president, according to a prominent republican senator, will undoubtedly regard any such suggestion, and seek to make it plain throughout the country.

Not such a word of praise will be withheld from the French delegates. When allowances have been made for the difficulties of Frenchmen, as well as the preponderance of American conditions and modes of thought, it is undeniable that, as soon as the French delegation has been understood, the misleading effect of sundry erroneous notions with which they had been plied, they entered into the spirit of the conference and became truly helpful. The interview between Mr. Briand, Mr. Balfour and Sir Auckland Geddes that preceded the French prime minister's great statement of France's position, revealed the fundamental coincidence of French and British views upon the tasks of the conference, and the requirements of world peace.

Recognition of this fact enabled Mr. Balfour to follow up M. Briand's statement with his own expression of British solidarity with France should she ever be compelled again to stand as the foremost defender of European liberties. And—consideration to which the French are by no means insensitive—Mr. Balfour's speech, in its turn, made it far easier than it might otherwise have been for the French delegation to accept the British position, revealed the fundamental coincidence of French and British views upon the tasks of the conference, and the requirements of world peace.

French Cordial to British. Despite the quips and jests to which no real importance ought ever to have been attached, M. Briand, as I have good reason to know, ardently desires the closest understanding and fullest co-operation with England. Since his departure, the leading French delegates, M. Viviani and Sir Austen Chamberlain, have been busy with the opportunity of showing their cordiality towards their British colleagues, by whom it need hardly be said, their good will is warmly reciprocated. I have said enough to indicate the atmosphere within the conference, as distinguished from the doubts, the speculation and the vapors that surround the realization of the main desires of those who wish the conference well, that it is difficult to imagine how its outcome can be anything but a solid and enduring success.

ADVISED FROM U. S. LIKELY TO ATTEND

should first determine whether unanimity of action could be obtained internationally before attempting to extend the field for concerted action by the leading countries of the world.

Payments Coming. Germany is required to pay 500,000,000 marks of gold on January 1, 1922, and about $200,000,000 on February 15, the latter payment being the quarterly installment of the 26 per cent on the estimated value of German exports during the last quarter of 1921. These payments are due under the reparations agreement between the allies and Germany of last March, which France is to receive 52 per cent, Great Britain 25 per cent, Italy 10 per cent, the remainder going to the smaller allied and associated states.

The German treasury, according to authoritative statement in Berlin, feels itself able to cover these payments but doubts whether its resources will be sufficient to meet installments of the same amount coming due on April 1 and May 15, 1922. Authoritative opinion in the French armament delegations that while the meeting of representatives of the banks of issue may give temporary assistance to Germany on the question of exchange, something more comprehensive must be done early in the new year to restore the value of the German mark abroad or Germany may not be able to meet subsequent installments.

The only solution, it is felt, that might be adequate would be one arrived at by an international conference in which to assure success the United States as the dominant financial power must take part. The desire exists to have the American government call such a conference.

ARCHITECTS' BODY OFFERS SERVICES

program must give the approximate amount of space required for each unit or department, the character of construction and other details required to limit the cost of the program to a reasonable figure. Such a program can be prepared only by the most competent architectural assistance at considerable expense.

Causes Much Delay. The ordinary competition causes a great deal of delay in the construction of a program based on this survey. Third, the time spent in judging property, which will take approximately six to eight weeks, the time spent in the preparation of plans and specifications for the work, estimating and letting of contracts would have to be added.

Should you invite and receive any number of designs in open competition, you would be limited to selecting only one design for any particular building, as you could not under such a plan but select the most desirable of the designs given in the designs not accepted.

Should our proposal be accepted you would receive the design of any and all designs suggested by the architects in the competition. The design would be made desirable to incorporate in the plans and designs finally adopted.

A general competition must be anonymous and therefore, the awards might be made in the experience required to properly select the design that will be most desirable to carry out the work entrusted to them.

Under the plan we propose, you will be assured of efficient handling of every detail of the service required.

Chairman Inman, replying to the proposition, stated that he believed Atlanta has as good talent as there is in the architectural business, and that, all things being equal, Atlanta architects would be given the work, but personally he disapproved of the "association" idea. He stated that he thought the individual attention of an architect or an architectural firm would be better promoted by an individual award of work.

Mr. Inman suggested that a committee of the organization be appointed to confer further with the board of trustees. Mr. Mays replied that his body already had a special committee that would take up the matter.

Mr. Robert, representing Robert & Co., architects and engineers, was present as an architect not taking part in the association plan, and made application to be awarded the building of whatever technical schools the commission should decide on. His firm was engaged to plan the big expansion work at Georgia Tech, and he stated that his company is peculiarly equipped to give the best kind of service in the construction of a new high school or other technical school.

Hear Baltimore Man. At the banquet meeting Chairman Walter C. Connor presided. The committee heard from J. E. Griner, of Baltimore, member of J. E. Griner & Co., consulting engineers associated with Spiker & Lese, Atlanta architects, in case their plan of the auditorium is chosen by the commission.

Mr. Griner has had charge of more than $150,000,000 worth of bridge construction, and is now chairman of a commission spending $500,000,000 on the development work in Baltimore. He was appointed by President Wilson as an expert on bridges and railroads on the engineering commission which was sent to Russia to report on industrial conditions there.

The engineer arrived in Atlanta Tuesday and made a cursory inspection of the proposed viaduct routes. He advised the committee against the building of ramps from the bridge, stating that it would be better to construct an exit to the railroad yards from the Forsyth street viaduct.

less than 45 miles an hour, and others fixed the speed even faster. He was driving on the left side, it was stated. Shipley's machine crashed into the roadster and buried the occupants to the ground and practically wrecked both machines. The small baby was thrown several feet, according to witnesses.

In an ambulance from Barclay & Brandon's conveyed the injured persons to Grady hospital. The baby sustained a badly bruised nose. Sayres was not hurt, but had an injured ankle and bruises. Mr. and Mrs. Hansberger also received lacerations and bruises. Shipley, Rodgers and Mrs. Thompson were arrested by Call Officers Evans and Goode.

COUNCILMAN SIMS ALTERS CHARGES

Councilman Sims introduced and the council passed an ordinance to bar whites and negroes from attending the same house of worship or same school. The mayor vetoed it, and the councilman Sims attacked him as a "spineless ass," charging that the mayor had instigated and advocated the very ordinance he vetoed. The mayor countered with the charge that the councilman was appealing to base prejudices in an attempt at political advancement.

The councilman then gave out a statement in which he declared that since the mayor vetoed the ordinance he had been informed that there were white children in Atlanta attending negro schools.

Superintendent Sutton asserted that there is no mixing of the races in the public schools. Councilman Sims said Monday that his reference was to Clark university.

King Admits Charge. Tuesday night President King readily admitted that there were teachers of both races at the school. "There always have been, and the same thing is true of practically every negro college in the south, except those maintained solely by the negro churches," he said. "This fact has been known all the time and has never been questioned before. The work of these teachers with the negroes has been the endorsement of the leading ministers of the white churches."

Tuesday morning President King called Mr. Sims over the telephone after having read the councilman's published statement that, according to his information, white children were receiving instruction at Clark university.

Claims Sims Evasive. "I called up Councilman Sims this morning when I saw the statement quoted to him in the morning paper," he said, "and asked him why he did not find out the facts before using the name of this institution in a way so calculated to damage it in the estimation of the people of this community. He could give me no satisfactory answer. He said some person residing in the neighborhood of the university had told him that white children were coming here to school. I asked him to give me the name of that person, and he sidestepped that question, also."

"Clark university is a school for colored youths supported by the northern Methodist church. I am president of the university by appointment. I have been here seven years, and there has not been a white child in the university in that time, and I know there has not been a white child here since thirty years ago, when a few children of white faculty members took some classes. The children of white faculty members now attend various white schools in Atlanta."

Norcross Speaks. Prior to Senator Harris' speech, Paul H. Norcross, city engineer, spoke on the city waterworks and sanitary system. He declared the city waterworks are "the heart, blood and arteries of Atlanta, and that without their life, health and happiness would cease to exist." He related the history of waterwork and sanitary developments in Atlanta and touched on the bond issue, $2,850,000 of which will be used in developing the waterworks.

"It is appropriate that this should be spent on our waterworks," he said, "for at times the present waterworks are called on to supply 100 per cent more than the average supply of water, which could not be continued for any definite time."

At the opening of the meeting the members of the "Golden Tornado," of Tech, who were especially invited, were introduced by Coach "Red" Clay and welcomed with applause.

Charged With Theft. Two Waycross Men Are Held in Texas

Texarkana, Texas, November 29.—(Special.)—Two young men were arrested and placed in jail today by Constable Floyd, of the Texas side, after they had traded a new Ford car with a negro for an old worn-out flivver of scarcely any value and $100 in cash. They had registered last night at a local hotel as "L. C. Smith and brother, Memphis," but after their arrest, they gave their names as St. H. Body and J. W. Churchwell, and their home as Waycross, Ga.

They said they had "borrowed" the car from a man at Waycross to make a trip to Texas, but could give the arresting officers no satisfactory reason why they had disposed of it. They will be held in the county jail pending advice from Waycross officers, who have been telegraphed.

$24,150 REPORTED IN "Y" CAMPAIGN

First Day's Pledges Encourage the Workers. Luncheon to Be Held This Afternoon.

CAMPAIGN FACTS.
Campaign objective $160,000
Reported Tuesday 24,150
Balance needed 75,850

Workers' day in the Y. M. C. A. campaign for $160,000 was a great success for 129 of the men who engaged on the canvass turned in $24,150, to start the ball rolling. The report was highly encouraging both in the sum of money represented and the number of subscriptions.

The day's honors went to the men of division C, generated by W. W. Orr. This division turned in a total of $4,875, more than doubling the amount of division B, under W. M. Brownlee, which is credited with $2,420. As a result of its Tuesday's showing, division C was nicknamed "The Go-getters," and "General" Orr flung a challenge to every other division for campaign honors.

Team No. 15, captained by S. F. Boykin, was the honor team for amount, reporting more than any other one division, and over twice as much as the next nearest team. His report was $2,800. Second was team No. 8, under W. H. Spratlin, of division B, with $1,125, while E. J. Coolidge, captain of team No. 12, division C, led the third placers, with $915 turned in. Division B secured the largest number of subscriptions with 23, while division C was one under that. Teams 9 and 10 of B, and 12 and 14 of C, turned in eight subscriptions each.

Tuesday's report carried no subscriptions from outside the working organization. It included some of the advance gifts announced Monday night, but only when the donor was a worker. The balance of the advance gifts will be absorbed in this noon's meeting.

Old Guard Report.
The Old Guard, led by J. K. Orr, put in a cheering report of $15,000 from three sources, and S. C. Dobbs, who made the report for Mr. Orr, was greeted with a great shout when he made the announcement.

First report of general solicitation will be made at the luncheon this afternoon at 1 o'clock in campaign headquarters, 66 North Broad street. Indications are that a splendid response will be revealed in Wednesday's figures.

There are upwards of 8,000 prospective subscribers represented in the card index which has been arranged for the convenience of the solicitors, and in so far as it is possible, every canvasser gets the card of the people whom he wants to solicit.

One of the daily ceremonies is the setting of a huge campaign clock, which has been placed on the third floor level of the Flatiron building. This honor goes to the division making the best daily report.

CHRISTMAS SEALS TO BE DISTRIBUTED DURING THE WEEK
The Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association is distributing $100,000 worth of Christmas seals among the business firms and individuals in the city during this week, with a request that the recipients remit promptly for the stamps.
This is the first move in a city-wide sale of the Christmas seals which has been undertaken by the Atlanta Woman's club, under the direction of Mrs. B. M. Boykin, and will be followed later in December by an active street sale of the stamps.
All proceeds from the sale will go directly to the support of the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis association in its fight against the disease.
For many years this sale has been included in the festivities of the season and its fifteenth year is looked forward to with much expectation.
The first seals were made and sold in 1907 by Miss Emily P. Bissel, of the Delaware Red Cross, when $3,000 was realized. In the following year, the seals were sponsored by the national Red Cross and were put on sale over the nation, under the direction of the National Tuberculosis association.
Last year, the sponsorship of the Red Cross was withdrawn, since the sale had reached such proportions that it was no longer necessary, so that at present the entire campaign is managed by the tuberculosis movement.
It is a singular coincidence that the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association, the beneficiary of the sale of the seals locally, should have been founded in the same year that the first seals were sold. It has since grown into one of the most important public agencies in the city, whose work has had a very extensive bearing on the health records of the city.

Encourage Plan To Bring Scotch Girls to Georgia

Young Women Anxious to Come to U. S., Declares Strachan.

Hundreds of capable and energetic Scotch women are anxious to come to Atlanta and other cities in Georgia to enter domestic service and housewives of this section can solve the service problem satisfactorily and permanently by providing employment for them, according to James A. Strachan, 229 Whitehall street, who is working on a plan to bring a large group of these women to the south in the spring.

The plan of Mr. Strachan, who is a native of Scotland, came to light last week when he wrote a letter to Governor Hardwick asking his cooperation in the move. When seen at his place of business Tuesday Mr. Strachan said he had met with much success in his plans and said he hoped to bring over a small number of women as early as January 1, 1922.

Recently I placed an advertisement in a Scotch newspaper seeking a Scotch woman to come to Atlanta to serve as my housekeeper," Mr. Strachan said. "I received so many replies that I decided to see if I could not interest Atlanta and Georgia people in a plan to bring a large group of these people to this country."

Pointing to a pile of letters, Mr. Strachan said he was confident that now is a propitious time to bring the Scotch girls to America for domestic service.

All Are Educated.
"You can see by these letters that these girls all are educated. Nearly all of them have been trained in domestic science in the excellent schools of Scotland," he added. "These girls are accustomed to working and are not averse to entering domestic service. Many of them will be able to pay their own passage to America, while others will come providing possible employers will advance them their passage, the money to be deducted later from their wages."

"They are excellent cooks above all; most of them are capable of needlework and other sewing," he said.

During the administration of Governor Terrell about twelve years ago, Mr. Strachan went to his old home in Scotland, in the northern part of that country, and secured 84 Scotch girls whom he brought back to Georgia. He said many of these girls are living now in Georgia and have been successful in their work.

"There are about 2,000,000 more women than men in the British Isles now," Mr. Strachan said. "Many of these women live in Scotland and a large number of them are free to come to America. From the letters I have received I am of the opinion that a large colony could be brought from Scotland to Georgia without much effort. Of course the immigration laws now permit only a limited number of people entering during a certain period, but by next spring there would be no doubt that a large group could be brought through with the permission of the immigration authorities. According to my present plans I am going to Scotland early next year and if I receive the needed cooperation will bring back at least 100 Scotch girls for service here. Since the Constitution printed my letter to the governor, I have received many inquiries in Atlanta by mail. I also received a letter from a lawyer in Savannah saying that fifty of the girls could be placed in Savannah homes without any trouble."

Stanley Gets Letter.
Governor Hardwick turned Mr. Strachan's letter over to Hal M. Stanley, commissioner of labor. Mr. Stanley wrote Mr. Strachan that he would co-operate as much as possible to bring desirable people to Georgia. He said he had turned the letter over to J. J. Brown, who is ex-officio commissioner of immigration. James I. Hicks, assistant commissioner of agriculture, said he had received the letter and would refer the matter to Commissioner Brown on his return to Atlanta during the week.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY IS CONTEMPLATED

Rumored Promoters Are Considering Linking T. A. & G. With Rome and Northern Railroad.

Rome, Ga., November 29.—(Special.)—Electrification of the Tennessee, Alabama & Georgia railroad, after linking it with the Rome and Northern railroad, is a plan of Chattanooga promoters, backed by eastern capital, according to a rumor here today.

Although the project is not dependent upon the acquisition of Muscle Shoals by Henry Ford, it was said that such action would further the enterprise by providing cheaper electric power.

The plan, according to the report here, is to extend the Rome and Northern about 16 miles to a junction with the T. A. & G. Both roads are in the hands of receivers and it is likely that the property could be secured at a low price. Engineers representing the promoters are expected here this week to confer with H. H. Shackleton, receiver for the Rome and Northern.

After Beginning, Women Officials Will Need No Aid

Brewton Mayor-Elect Says She Is Going to Clean Up Town.

Dublin, Ga., November 29.—(Special.)—"We will have to get the men to show us how to start off when we are sworn into office, but after that we can manage the business for ourselves."

Mrs. H. H. Beall, who Saturday was elected mayor of Brewton, with five other women as members of city council, made the above statement this afternoon in disclosing that none of the women elected knew they were in the race until after their election had been declared.

"Yes, I'm going to serve and do the best I can to make the town a good mayor," she said.

"I didn't know anything about it until I was elected; neither did any of the other women who were elected on the council, but I am going to serve and most of them will, if not all."

"We are going to clean up the town and get things in good shape. I don't know yet about employing women police. That is yet to be determined."

I see where there is a report out that this is to be done."

Mrs. Beall is a handsome matron, the wife of H. H. Beall, one of the leading merchants of Brewton, and the retiring mayor.

Brewton is the first town in the state to elect a full municipal ticket composed entirely of women, and so far as is known, the first anywhere in the south.

Here's a Letter From One of Our Depositors

He recently removed from Atlanta to a California city. On November 10th he wrote us the following letter:

Mr. Charles I. Ryan, Vice President
Fourth National Bank,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 26th ultimo in reference to my closing my account at your bank. I beg to say that my reason for doing so is because I have come to Long Beach to live and not due to any lack of courtesy or interest on the part of the officials or employees of your bank, for on the contrary I have never in my long experience of over fifty years with banks in all parts of this country met with more kindness and consideration than with yours. It is a regret to me to have to sever relations with it.

Very truly yours,

BROTHER'S DEATH LAID TO SCHUMAN

Savannah Man Declares Charges Are False and He Will Prove His Innocence.

Savannah, Ga., November 29.—(Special.)—Robert L. Schuman, in jail here on a charge of the murder of his brother, Corbett Schuman, this afternoon declared that he is "as innocent as a new born babe."

Corbett Schuman was found in his store some weeks ago with his head beaten to a jelly. His brothers broke into the place and reported the killing. Two negroes were arrested and released.

The brothers, Robert being leader, offered $500 reward for the apprehension of the slayer.

The coroner's inquest was delayed for two weeks until last night and Robert Schuman held after the coroner's inquest with notes found in the store of the dead man. The alleged motive of killing is that the dead man had not kept faith with an agreement between the brothers about deals in whisky.

Freddie McGill, 18, of Pendleton, S. C., walked from his home town to Atlanta for the purpose of seeing his fifteen-year-old sister, Cleo, at the city stockade, and Tuesday greeted her at that institution with all the fondness of a brother. The distance covered by Freddie in his walk is approximately 200 miles and it required two weeks to make the trip.

A number of Atlantans have interested themselves in the welfare of the pair and are taking steps to secure the girl's release. Freddie patriotically stated he would be happy here or anywhere else with his sister, who, he states, left home because of cruelties on the part of their step-mother. Their mother died several months ago.

KU KLUX LITIGATION PAPERS ARE SERVED

W. J. Simmons, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, was served late Monday with papers in a suit for $100,000 filed against that organization by Attorney W. H. Terrell. The suit was for alleged services rendered by the plaintiff to the defendant organization.

The first suit for the same amount filed several weeks ago was marked in default by Judge W. D. Ellis last Saturday, which gave the plaintiff the right to collect if judgment of perfection of service could be proven. Attorney Terrell again filed suit and service was perfected. The defendants are required to bring records of the order to the superior court on December 12 for a hearing on the suit.

Seat Sale Opens Today for John McCormack Concert

Seats for the John McCormack concert bill for next Wednesday night at the Auditorium will go on sale this morning at 9 o'clock at

JOHN MCCORMACK.

The Cable Piano company, 82 North Broad street, and the sale will continue through the date of the concert or until the capacity of the building is exhausted. A long line of patrons is expected at the box office today.

The audiences drawn by the great Irish tenor have grown steadily in size since his first visit to Atlanta, and his last appearance, two years ago, was marked by a throng which filled every seat and all available standing room, and fully a thousand applied for seats too late to obtain them.

The recital will be the third of the all-star concert series presented by the Salter Musical bureau with the co-operation of the Atlanta Music club. Officers and members of the club have taken many boxes and arena seats for the season, and the audience, especially for the McCormack concert, will resemble an opera gathering.

Hundreds of out-of-town patrons are expected to attend the McCormack concert. Requests for reservations have been pouring in for the past week. Large parties have been made up in several nearby cities and tickets for the concert have in several instances come from hundreds of miles away.

XMAS BAZAR BEING PLANNED BY LOCAL ELKS

With a reproduction of San Francisco Chinatown as the principal feature, besides dancing, vaudeville and other attractions, the Elks' Christmas bazar will be held every night except Sunday from December 10 to 17, in the basement of the Elks' hall, 40 Ellis street.

Tickets will be on sale in a few days, and in order to stimulate the sale prizes will be offered to the ladies disposing of the largest number. Three diamond rings will constitute first, second and third prizes, and the fourth prize will be an Elgin gold wristwatch.

Doc Lamar, former chief of police of the Chinatown district, will lay out the basement of the Elks' hall as a reproduction of Chinatown. There will be vaudeville booked directly from New York, and a cabaret in full swing every night of the bazar.

The committee of Elks who have the plans for the bazar in hand are Judge J. F. McClelland, chairman; Joe Stewart, Walter H. Gordon, Walter Hinchcliffe, S. C. Little and J. Clayton Burke.

HEAD OF HOLMES INSTITUTE WILL WELCOME INQUIRY

Replying to a communication sent to Mayor Key by Kendall Weisiger, president of the central council of social agencies, asking for an investigation into the operation of the Holmes Institute, a local negro institution, Rev. B. R. Holmes, president, issued a statement Tuesday welcoming a probe of the place at any time.

"The Holmes institute has been operating for more than ten years, making a specialty of training the youths who are forsaken, or whose parents are dead," the president said, in part. "Another class which the institute houses are those who are permitted to run about the streets at all hours of the night."

"It is cheaper for the city and the state to spend money to correct the boy before he commits the crime than after."

"The institute has received the support of leading citizens of both races, many of whom have made personal visits to the institution and investigated its operations and commended the management."

SHURLEY TO ASSIST JUDGE HUMPHRIES

Face in Mirror Refuses to Fade With Scrubbing

This is a story of a mirror with a mystery. It was received by The Constitution Tuesday night from D. A. Mosely, of Danielsville, and his letter below tells the whole story:

"While sitting in his room on Thursday night, November 16," the letter reads, "Mr. C. C. Croot, a reliable farmer living three miles north of here, was playing with a little grandchild. When he glanced over at a mirror on a dresser in the room, which he has owned for 30 years, an almost perfect face appeared in it."

"He immediately called the other members of the family into the room and Mrs. Croot believes it to be the likeness of her father, the late Hosea B. Mattox. Mr. Croot does not think so."

The forehead and hair seem plain and the eyes are round with no expression. The nose is not prominent—that portion of it being more like a skeleton. The right eye and right corner of the mouth are not very perfect. Chin whiskers, trimmed, represent that part of the make-up, while the neck is not visible.

"The family has tried in vain to remove the face from the mirror, using soap and water, but it seems to grow brighter."

"People are visiting Mr. Croot's residence in great numbers in the evenings to view the sight as it is plainly visible in the lamp light, even when the room is dark."

"We joked Mr. Croot concerning this and asked him every conceivable question, among them being 'if he had noticed any defect in the mirror.'"

"No," he said, "and we use it every day."

"Next we asked him that when he saw this sight on Thursday night if the window sash was still hanging around his neck when they caught him the next day. He replied:

"There is no superstition about me and I know of no way to account for it."

KIWANIS NAMES BOARD TO SELECT 1922 CANDIDATES

A committee to make nominations for the 1922 officers of the Kiwanis club was appointed Tuesday by President Walter Barnwell. The committee will make its report at the next luncheon of the club, to be held Tuesday at the Periwick on Tuesday.

James E. Belcher is temporary chairman of the nominating committee. Other members are S. S. Wallace, Simon S. Selig, William H. Brittain, W. Tom Winn, and two past presidents, George F. Eubanks and Henry C. Heinz.

Music for the luncheon Tuesday was furnished by Wathen Bricken, son of a Kiwanian.

BLANKETS ASKED FOR CHILD'S HOME

Brr-r-r. It's cold these winter nights to the average Atlantian underneath a pile of blankets, but to the little inmates of the Atlanta Child's home on Angier avenue, a winter night is even more to be dreaded, with the insufficient covering provided for them. The 45 tiny wards of the institution have only half enough blankets to go around, and until this condition is remedied there will be risk of illness among the tots.

Contributions to the blanket fund that is being raised to meet this need of the home, may be sent to Mrs. F. P. Gaffney, 55 St. Charles avenue, chairman of Circle No. 5, a body of Atlanta women who have undertaken to take the home with the necessary blankets.

FAIR AND WARMER, SAYS FORECASTER

"Fair and warmer" Wednesday is the official prediction given out Tuesday by F. F. Von Herrmann, forecaster of the local weather bureau. "The temperature Wednesday morning should be about 46 degrees," he said. "I can't say how long the fine weather will last, however, as another disturbance has started down in Texas."

Your Help is needed now

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. is not a civic institution in the sense that it is supported by municipal or national taxation. But it is a civic body in that it is accomplishing a civic duty and fulfilling a civic need.

It is educating boys to be strong in brain, strong in body and strong in soul. It is giving them culture in its Educational classes, thew, sinew and good red blood in its Gymnasium, morality in its Religious courses. It is helping them not only to be brighter men but also to be better men and mightier men.

2,656 young men and boys are now sharing in the helpful influences of Atlanta's Y. M. C. A. 586 young men have lived in the Association building during the year and 1,660 temporarily, making a total of 2,246. 111 boys and young men, enrolled in the night schools, have attended 146 class sessions, with a total attendance of 2,202.

The Y. M. C. A. has grown to be a powerful factor in our city life because the reason for its existence is powerful. It calls for support and deserves it. It makes its appeal with the same right and in the same spirit that the State makes its demands upon every just citizen to contribute his share toward the maintenance of every function which insures the highest type of Americanism.

$100,000.00 is needed to enable this great institution to carry on—to pay off its mortgage to cover a war-time deficit and finish the Colored Building.

It calls upon you. Your help is needed—and needed now.

Mrs. Calhoun Gives Tacky Luncheon For Sewing Club

Mrs. Phinley Calhoun's sewing club had little temptation to formality yesterday, when, assembling as her guests for luncheon, they were invited in to a table covered with a red cotton cloth, its centerpiece of turnips and carrots, the "greens" giving height to the decoration and the healthy looking carrots providing a wholesome color in keeping with the scheme suggested by the tablecloth.

Paper napkins were rolled in blue celluloid napkin rings, and the drinking cups were of brown earthenware. The places were markedly very personal verses about each of the guests, these verses illustrated in very personal pictures. The menu was composed of turnip greens, bacon, sweet potatoes and such homely fare, and the condiments were in an old-fashioned silver chafin stand.

The colored maid who waited on the table had her hair "wropped" and standing out from her head, while her buffed apron and flounced skirts belonged to a period as far back as the butler's blue cut-away, which might have been a hand-me-down from a member of the continental congress.

In striking contrast to the "tacky" luncheon were the costumes of hostess and guests—velvet gowns, furs and feathers.

The meetings of Mrs. Calhoun's sewing club, a group of friends of long standing, are of frequent occurrence, and luncheons always follow, but none so unique or so merry as the miniature "Georgia products" dinner of Mrs. Calhoun's planning.

MAYONNAISE

better than you can make

Tested Recipes

Chicken Salad

Cut equal parts of chicken and celery diced. Thoroughly mix with Duke's Mayonnaise, adding a few teaspoons of ice water. Serve on lettuce leaf.

Waldorf Salad

2 cups peeled diced apples, 1 1/2 cups diced celery, 2 cups diced pineapples, 1 cup seedless raisins or grapes. Mix with Duke's Mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce leaf.

Fruit Salad

2 cans sliced pineapples, 1 can white seeded cherries, 6 oranges thoroughly peeled, 1-4 lb. almonds. Cut oranges and pineapple in small pieces. Mix with 1 1/2 cups Duke's Mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce leaf.

Not even in your own kitchen can you make such delicious mayonnaise of such consistency, and flavor—as Duke's is the only genuine—fresh egg—uncooked mayonnaise on the market, packed in attractive glass jars that will keep indefinitely.

Mrs. Duke personally directs the preparation of her mayonnaise just as she did before it had gained such fame in the Carolinas and now throughout the South. In few places over the entire country are there cooks whose mayonnaise comes up to the standard of Mrs. Duke's.

Duke's Home-Made Mayonnaise

The ingredients that go into Duke's are selected with the utmost care. Only the very best grade of fresh country eggs and highest quality salad oils are used. You couldn't select your own materials more carefully. The cost of Duke's is just about the same as when you make it yourself—without figuring all the time and trouble required.

Ready for any emergency

Nothing in your refrigerator or pantry will take the place of Duke's Home-Made Mayonnaise. For the expected guest, for Sunday Tea, and on the cook's afternoon off—the preparation of delicious salads and sandwiches is a simple matter. The biggest job is over when the mayonnaise is made. Keep a half dozen jars of Duke's on your pantry shelf. It will prove your best friend in emergencies.

Two Thousand Dollar Luncheon At Woman's Club

At a subscription luncheon Thursday of next week it is planned to present to Mrs. B. M. Boykin the $2,000 secured by this committee to be applied directly to the auditorium fund. The cook books will be ready at that time and will be turned over to the committee, according to the money they have ready to turn in. It is expected that each committee member will turn in at least her quota, $20 for ten books, and many have asked to take orders for more. The luncheon will be one of the popular subscription luncheons, and reservations from clubs wishing to sell the book on a percentage basis, will be impossible to reserve books unless they are already ordered through the committee.

The cook book will be "de luxe" in every respect, and with its beautiful paper, engravings, photographs and nearly a thousand delicious recipes from the most prominent people, nationally, from the southland and from Georgia, it will form a most popular Christmas present. The latest slogan of the Woman's club, in regard to Christmas greetings is, "Say It With a Cook Book."

Double Motive.

The Woman's club in producing this cook book has had a double motive. In the first place it has seemed commensurate with its position as one of the largest women's clubs in the world, to produce something lasting and tangible which would embody its highest ideals in womanhood. With this in mind, it has proved doubly gratifying to also be a medium for making Georgian and southern products better known all over the world, as the advance sale predicts. The Atlanta Woman's club cook book will be sold by 100 members this week at $2 per copy.

The list of those taking cook book orders are as follows, although others are volunteering from time to time, and the great advantage in joining this committee lies in being assured of as many cook books as one desires for one's self, and the chance of securing copies for friends.

Dr. Sweet Gives Health Lecture At Woman's Club

Dr. Sweet, physician in charge at Agnes Scott college, presented in a clear and forceful talk the necessity of better health in women to meet their new demands, and added responsibilities.

Health is the result of hard work. The inheritance of lax muscles from homekeeping ancestors is a great handicap. Women should take pride in boasting of health gaining stunts rather than recitals of their various diseases.

Dr. Sweet was followed by Miss Randolph, director of athletics, who made the listeners straighten up several times as she spoke of good and bad posture which made for the improvement or impairment of health.

Miss Randolph had brought four of Agnes Scott's charming pupils, and gave living demonstrations of how to be, as well as how not to be healthy and graceful.

These lectures are so valuable that the Woman's club wishes to have as many as possible benefit by them and urges the public to attend. Admission free.

Dr. Sweet Gives Health Lecture At Woman's Club

Dr. Sweet, physician in charge at Agnes Scott college, presented in a clear and forceful talk the necessity of better health in women to meet their new demands, and added responsibilities.

DOUBLE DEADLOCK ON IRISH PARLEY

London, November 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—An anxious day in the negotiations designed for the pacification of Ireland ended tonight with the hope that a complete collapse of the parleys might still be averted.

Sir James Craig, premier of Ulster, as was expected, declared before the northern parliament in Belfast that Ulster had absolutely refused to accept an all-Irish parliament, demanded as a solution by the Sinn Fein delegation. But he announced Ulster's willingness to discuss other proposals for an Irish settlement if they were submitted by next Tuesday.

Premier Lloyd-George immediately summoned the Sinn Fein delegates to consult with him and his ministers and submitted to them new proposals which, if they meet with the approval of the Sinn Fein, will be presented to the Ulster officials before next Tuesday. The nature of the alternative proposals will not be divulged pending their consideration by the Sinn Fein.

The situation still is very critical owing to the double deadlock, Ulster refusing to enter an all-Ireland parliament and the Sinn Fein steadily refusing to yield on the question of allegiance to the crown. The negotiations, however, have not been broken off and may be continued on a new basis.

Many Are Drowned As Huge Tidal Wave Floods Entire Town

Manila, November 29.—The entire town of Ibaig, in the province of Capiz, was inundated by a tidal wave Sunday and many houses with their occupants swept out to sea, according to dispatches from the postmaster of Ibaig.

Dispatches to constabulary headquarters here said the town of Macato, in the same province, was also submerged by a tidal wave and more than a hundred natives drowned.

U. S. COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE LANDS IN HAITI

Port Au Prince, Haiti, November 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—The American army transport Argonne arrived here today from Philadelphia bringing the special United States commission investigating the occupation of Haiti and the Dominican republic by American troops.

Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, chairman of the committee, said in a speech regarding the visit:

"We have come as impartial and loyal friends, animated by a spirit of collaboration to seek an economic and political basis for the future progress of Haiti and to discover and assure means for maintaining in your midst social and administrative order, peace, justice, education and prosperity."

"This work, always difficult, must be carried out now in the face of a financial crisis, lowered wages and depressed prices for agricultural and industrial products in Asia, Europe and the two Americas."

"We wish to examine into the ways of following with the people and their representatives can find that union of security and right and duty they have been seeking. Diplomatic conventions alone are not sufficient. We need not only these but an accord of purpose, strengthened by a sympathetic mutual understanding. Let us seek them together."

General D'Artagnay, president of the republic, replied to the speech of Mr. McCormick.

The committee heard the testimony of several witnesses during the afternoon.

NO PROOF OF GUILT, SAYS LANDRU DEFENSE

Versailles, November 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—The backbone of the defense in the case of Henri Landru will be the absence of proof that any of the eleven persons the defendant is alleged to have murdered are dead and also the failure of the police to "find anything resembling the remains of a human body" when they first searched the villa at Gambais occupied by Landru on April 13, 1914, and that the bones and teeth produced by the prosecution were not discovered until the second search of the premises on April 29.

This statement was made today by M. Moro Giffieri, chief counsel for the defense, as he rose to address the jury after M. Godefroy had finished his argument for the prosecution. Godefroy had ended his address with an assurance to the jury that they need not fear a judicial error. "We must set up the guillotine, when it is necessary, and it is death that I ask for the assassin of Gambais," the prosecutor dramatically concluded.

Landru, stolid and unmoved, listened to the plea of his defender as he previously had done under the attack of the prosecutor—the coolest person in the courtroom.

"Innuendo and insinuation makes up the case of the prosecution without a bit of proof having been adduced," said M. Moro Giffieri. "We have no revelations to make. We shall, pointing to the prosecution, 'Show us our victims. We want to pity, only justice.'"

The attorney said he would show that between April 13 and April 23 human bones and bones of all kinds were "planted" at the Gambais villa by persons who had reason to desire the conviction of Landru.

She—"My poor brother jumped on the river last summer to escape. The heat. It was deeper than he thought and he drowned." He—"Did he succeed in swimming?"—Houston Post.

WARNING THE UNWARY.

In officially warning unwary Georgians against unscrupulous would-be dispensers of practically worthless foreign exchange and bonds backed by depreciated Polish marks, T. B. Conner, chief examiner of the Georgia Securities commission, has performed a public service that may mean the saving of thousands of dollars to the people of this state.

Mr. Conner, in a statement in The Constitution, told of a letter that had inadvertently fallen into his hands, in which a "New York concern" offered to sell the recipient a 10,000-mark bond for $19.85 in American cash, the would-be seller representing that as soon as Polish money reaches par the investor would realize $119 for every dollar invested.

The truth is, as Mr. Conner pointed out, the current value of the mark is so low that 10,000 of them are worth only $3, instead of $19.85; with no probability of its reaching its normal exchange value in many years—if ever.

On the face of it, the scheme looks tempting; and it is easy enough to see how an unsophisticated and credulous person with a few loose dollars might be lured into a separation from his good money for bad by a bait offering such fabulous returns from a modest investment.

How many, it any, citizens of Georgia have been "taken in" by this offer nobody knows.

Unfortunately there is no Georgia law under which the state can prosecute the would-be perpetrators of this fraud; but the warning that has been issued should be sufficient to protect the unwary, and in issuing it the securities commission has earned the gratitude of all honest Georgians.

By keeping one foot on the back of the former, Candidate Harding pleased the irreconcilable Wilson-hating element, which rallied to his support on the theory that, once elected, he would have nothing whatever to do with any form of "entanglement foreign alliance," and that his expressions favorable to an "association of nations" were made with fingers crossed and for the sake of expediency to win the support of the pro-league republican vote, in the ranks of which were many eminent republican leaders.

The road was straight, and the paths of the two horses ran parallel, directly toward the white house. So everything went fine for the time being.

But the big road now forks, and each horse now has his own view of which fork to take.

So the time has come when the president must decide once and for all which of the two mounts he will ride from this time on, for it is obvious that he cannot longer remain upright on both!

The pro-league republicans who helped elect him are demanding that he make good his campaign promises respecting the peace movement as they understood it; hence, the president's recent renewal of his campaign suggestion respecting an "association" of nations—which, if it accomplished anything whatsoever, would necessitate in principle the indorsement of the Woodrow Wilson league-of-nations idea, by whatever name it might be called!

The "bitter-enders"—the "irreconcilables" of the Borah stripe—are equally as insistent that he make good his campaign promises by repudiating any suggestion of putting the country into the league or any form of an "association" or alliance of nations.

The republican "pro-leaguers" know that a mere "association" of nations lacking "teeth" and power and the necessary machinery to enforce peace would amount to nothing more than an international pink tea, and that it would be utterly useless.

The "irreconcilables," however, fear even a pink-tea peace association, for it might lead to something real—something like what Wilson wanted to do when he proposed an agreement that would enforce peace, and not simply talk about it.

It is easy enough for a cool-headed gymnast to ride two horses at top speed so long as they run side by side; and Candidate Harding did that most gracefully, reaching the white house without mishap.

But no human being on earth can ride two horses going in opposite directions.

The rider must get both feet upon the back of one or the other of his two steeds, when the fork of the road is reached.

President Harding has apparently reached the critical stage of that necessity; and his method of extricating himself from this difficulty will put his ingenuity and resourcefulness to a test which will be watched with universal interest.

The Christmas turkey always did roost high, but it has a mighty

China thinks it isn't asking much, of a free world, to ask for freedom.

If the world really wants universal peace, it should recognize the chance of centuries to get it.

It will be a job—but a mighty good one—to reduce a warship to a scrap of metal.

Resume Tariff Hearings.

Goin' home to Mary.

(From The Ohio State Journal.)

The first touch of wintry weather ought to inspire in persons with money and jobs and good prospects a determination to be generous. Despite the efforts of constituted authority, we fear there will be an unusual amount of real need this winter, especially if it is a long, cold one. Employment tendencies seem, from somewhat conflicting and confusing statistics, to be improving, but the improvement will not be fast enough to provide work right away for everybody who desires it and those who have it, or its financial equivalent, have simply got to help.

The organized charities of standing ought to be liberally supported this winter. While we sometimes think that too large a percentage of the dollar contributed through them goes into overhead charges, they have facilities for discovering needs and distributing relief which the individual has not and they do a great deal of good. Furthermore, if we do have what is known as a hard winter, not a few cases of want will come to the direct attention of the individual who has

FITZGERALD SCENE OF BIG FIRE LOSS

Fitzgerald, Ga., November 29.—With one block in the main business section of Fitzgerald practically wiped out by fire early this morning, totaling a loss of about $275,000 with small insurance, business men tonight were making plans to rebuild.

In response to calls for assistance, companies had arrived from Douglas, Ocilla, Tifton and Cordele. For several hours both telephone and telegraph communications were destroyed. Telegraph communication has been restored, but telephones are still out of commission.

The fire broke out in a building occupied by H. A. Burkhard, as a garage and automobile salesroom, and spread rapidly to the adjoining buildings. The blaze was discovered about 4 o'clock. Thirteen new automobiles were destroyed.

The building occupied by the Johnson Hardware company was the third to go. This was used as a storage warehouse. The fourth building to be consumed was that owned by Mrs. H. K. Sligh. The lower floor was used as a garage and for the storage of automobiles while the upper floor was used as an apartment house and was tenanted. Many of the tenants were forced to flee in their night clothes.

For a while it seemed that the whole business section of Fitzgerald was in flames and calls for assistance were immediately sent out. A strong northwest wind was blowing and the flames were making rapid progress.

The Fitzgerald Herald office was slightly damaged.

The loss sustained by Johnson Hardware company is estimated at $40,000 with $19,000 insurance, while the loss to the Sligh building is $70,000 with no insurance. Other estimates of damages could not be obtained. It is not known how the fire started.

Transportation And Marketing Data Sought

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON, Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, November 29.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—An announcement was made today by Representative Sydney Anderson, chairman of the joint committee on agricultural inquiry, that 44 committees of shippers had been appointed to work in conjunction with the executive committee of the railroads in securing data on the marketing and transportation facilities of the country. These committees are working under the direction of the transportation division of the commission and represent 95 per cent of the tonnage of commodities included in their membership are:

C. B. Hutchins, of Chicago, traffic manager of the American Farm Bureau federation; F. E. Todd, of Lincoln, Ill., vice president of Deere & Co., representing the agricultural implement industry; S. J. Lowell, of Leona, N. Y., master of the National Grange; R. D. Phillips, of Rochester, N. Y., of the International Apple Shippers' association; R. Cunningham, of Chicago, representing fruits and vegetables, who is working in conjunction with E. G. Dezell, assistant manager of the California Fruit Growers' change; A. J. Campbell, of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, representing the steel interests.

The committees, together with the representatives of the railroads, have been asked to complete their work by January 1, whereupon all data will be carefully reviewed and analyzed by an advisory committee, whose personnel will be announced shortly. There will be twelve members of this advisory committee, representing transportation, industry and agriculture.

Every phase of distribution is being investigated in relation to transportation. This investigation involves physical property, transportation service, the economic relation of transportation to agriculture and industry, the administration of transportation and the analysis of state and federal laws applying to transportation. A study is being made of the relation of car service and supply to the successful distribution of products, with particular reference to the present condition of equipment. It can be conservatively stated that 15 per cent of the equipment of the railroads is in poor condition.

A similar study is being made in relation to electric lines, water transportation and motors.

CHAPTER XV.

A high-caste Oriental girl is in most things very much like a European or American girl hedged in by gently inhibiting social regulations.

Thus the little princess was unprepared to cope with the unexpected—as the strange summons.

A summons—by the lips of a rough, fur-capped Afghan drover who had bullied his way past the sentinels.

"Tell the princess that I am here!" he had said, with a jolly air.

"But—consider the laws of the harem!"

"Consider the pimple on the back of a cockerel! Laws! Do not quote laws to an Afghan!"

"The slave girl had left, to return, a few minutes later, with the princess, who, at the Afghan's first words, spoken in a very low voice, had burst into a shout of joy, and a quick exclamation of:

Koom-Khan had spoken mutinous words!

"The sword with which even at that moment Aziza Nurmahai was defending himself."

"Alderrabman Khan had no thought for the eunuch, whom he had cut down as soon as they had entered the mausoleum. The man had crawled away, mortally injured, doubtless to bleed to death somewhere by the deserted river bank."

"And the princess fought on, frightened, in despair."

"By Allah and by Allah!" the nurse exclaimed. "The little princess has more sense than I thought! Enough sense, at least, to have taken along the Luck of the Gengizkhan—and if Al Nakia reaches there in time, both ancient blades will sing the song of blood together."

"And she sank on her knees, facing Mecca, and cried as if her heart would break, and prayed fervently."

"Thus the prayer on Ayeshah Zenzem's lips; and a prayer, too, was in the heart of Hector Wade as he rode through the streets of the town."

Hector thundered on.

"On—though his horse was ready to give up, its head bowed on its heaving, heaving chest."

"But he bent over the animal's neck, lifting it with every stride."

"Then, presently, as the tale of the trap into which Aziza Nurmahai had fallen drifted out of the palace on the servants' babbling lips and was repeated from mouth to mouth, in bazaar and mosque and caravanserai, there were expressions of sympathy and pity; and there was more than one, present and noble, merchant and green-turbaned, wide-stepping shaher, who threw leg across saddle and was off after Al Nakia's flying figure to help."

"The ancient Oriental blade was in his hand as he jumped from the horse and rushed through the open door of the mausoleum."

"His call echoed through the vaulted, white-stuccoed halls where slept the princess' ancestors."

"From an inner chamber came an answering call:

"Thank Allah!"

"Then hysterical laughter; a man's accented voice; a clanking of steel and steel—and Hector reached the chamber whence the cry had come."

"Up till this moment Alderrabman Khan had been merely playing with the princess; had not wished to do her a bodily injury. Perhaps, now, suddenly, his love for her—for love it was, though rough, boisterous, crude—turned into the primitive desire of primitive man that she who could not be his should never belong to anybody else, chiefly not to this upstart."

"Now he was about to draw..."

"But by this time, Hector's weapon was approaching him in dancing, narrowing circles, while the princess, regaining her flagging strength, was about to thrust in and under his skillfully handled shield. He heard the ominous crackle of steel from both sides, and so, suddenly but serenely, he did what most Asiatics would have done under the circumstances."

"Fight the inevitable!"

"And what price was there in it, what prize, what logic?"

"Why—outside the sky was blue and endless... Life, all around him!"

"Not he?"

"Why, then, choose death?"

"And so, skillfully, suddenly, just as the blades met above his head, he ducked, sat down quickly on the ground, and remained there, without the slightest taint of shame or self-consciousness."

"It appears that I am vanquished, I am thy slave, Al Nakia—and thine, Aziza Nurmahai!"

"With which he groped in his waist shawl, drew out a match and a sadly crumpled cigarette and lit it."

"Hector dropped the point of his sword. He laughed, frankly, loudly. He could not help himself. The governor's effrontery was too colossal."

THE PERFDY OF MISS BROWN

A PETER RUFF STORY

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

(Copyright, 1921, for The Constitution.)

Next Week, "Wonderful John Dory."

It was not until they were sitting out in the winter garden, taking their coffee and liqueurs, that the object of their meeting was referred to. Then Monsieur de Fonceilles drew Violet a little away from the others, and the Marquis, with a meaning smile, took Peter Ruff's arm and led him on one side. Monsieur de Fonceilles wasted no words at all.

"Monsieur Ruff has doubtless told you that last night I made him the offer of a great position among us."

"She looked at him with twinkling eyes."

"Go on, please," she said.

"I offered him a position of great dignity—of great responsibility," Monsieur de Fonceilles continued.

"I cannot explain to you its exact nature, but it is in connection with the most wonderful organization of its sort which the world has ever known."

"The 'Double-Four,' she murmured."

"Attached to the post is a princely salary and but one condition."

"Monsieur de Fonceilles said, watching the girl's face. 'The condition is that Mr. Ruff remains a bachelor.'"

"Violet nodded."

"Peter's told me all this," she remarked. "He wants me to give him up."

"Monsieur de Fonceilles drew a little closer to his companion. There was a peculiar smile upon his lips."

"Mr. dear, we lady," he said softly, "forgive me if I point out to you that with your appearance and gifs a marriage with our excellent friend is surely not the summit of your ambitions! Here in Paris, I promise you, here—we can do much better than that for you. You have not perhaps, a dot? Good! That is our affair. Give up your friend here, and we deposit in any bank you like the huge sum of two hundred and fifty thousand francs."

"Two hundred and fifty thousand francs!" Violet repeated, slowly.

"The two hundred and fifty thousand francs," he said.

"It is enough," he asked.

"She shook her head."

"It is not enough," she answered.

"Monsieur de Fonceilles raised his eyebrows."

"We do not bargain," he said coldly, "and money is not the chief thing in the world. It is for you, then, to name a sum."

"Monsieur de Fonceilles," she said, "tell me the amount of the national debt of France?"

"Somewhere about nine hundred million francs, I believe," he answered.

"She nodded."

"That is exactly my price," she declared.

"For giving up Peter Ruff?" he gasped.

"She looked at her employer thoughtfully."

"He doesn't look worth it, does he?" she said, with a queer little smile. "I happen to care for him, though—that's all."

"Monsieur de Fonceilles shrugged his shoulders. He knew men and women, and for the present he accepted defeat. He sighed heavily and said: "I congratulate you, friend, and I envy him," he said. "If ever you should change your mind, Madame—"

"It is our privilege, isn't it?" she remarked, with a brilliant smile. "If I do, I shall certainly let you know."

"On the way home, Peter, an old general—Miss Brown said, after he had escaped from a difficult position, and his sense of gratitude toward his companion was strong. He showed her many little attentions on the voyage. From Dover they had a carriage to themselves."

"Peter's Miss Brown said, after he had made her comfortable, "When is it to be?"

"When is what to be?" he asked, puzzled.

"Our marriage," she answered, looking at him for a moment in most bewitching fashion, and then suddenly dropping her eyes.

"Peter Ruff returned her gaze in blank amazement."

"Do you mean, Violet?" he exclaimed.

"Just what I say," she answered, composedly. "When are we going to be married?"

"Peter Ruff frowned."

"What nonsense!" he said. "We are not going to be married. You know that quite well."

"Oh, no, I don't!" she declared, smiling at him in a heavenly fashion. "I have been married for some time."

"Monsieur de Fonceilles then we were engaged. Incidentally, I have refused two hundred and fifty thousand francs. I believe an admirer, for your sake, I declared that I was going to marry you, and I must keep my word."

"Peter Ruff began to feel giddy. "Look here, Violet," he said, "you know very well that we arranged all that between ourselves."

"I arranged all that," she repeated, with a little laugh. "Perhaps we did. You asked me to marry you, and you have posed as my fiancé. You kept it up just as long as it suited you—it suits me to keep it up a little longer."

"Do you mean to say—that you seriously mean that you expect me to marry you?" he asked, aghast.

"I do," she admitted. "I have meant to do so some time. Sky was blue and endless... Life, all around him!"

"She was very alluring, and Peter Ruff hesitated. She held out her hands and leaned towards him. Her hands fell to the floor. She had raised her veil, and a faint perfume of violets stole into the carriage. Her lips were a little parted, her eyes were saying unutterable things."

"You don't want me to sue you
